

7 February 2013

New Plymouth District Court hearing today

Shell Todd Oil Services* has always supported the efforts of law enforcement to respond to this incident and to deter such activity in the future. That extended to supporting the Police's case for reparation. Our primary concern during the occupation in February last year was the safety of all concerned; the same value that continues to be at the heart of our business today along with operating in an environmentally sound manner.

STOS recognises the right of individuals to express their point of view and protest in a manner that does not place the safety of people or property at risk. We continue to extend our offer of an open conversation where there is a real desire to find solutions.

Rob Jager, General Manager, Shell Todd Oil Services Limited.

*Shell Todd Oil Services Limited is an operating company owned 50% Shell and 50% Todd Energy. The Noble Discoverer was under contract to STOS at the time of the incident.
